The European Yearbook of the History of Psychology. Sources, Theories, and Models (EYHP) is a peer-reviewed international journal devoted to the history of psychology, and especially to the interconnections between historiographic survey and problems of epistemology. EYHP welcomes contributions that offer precise reconstructions of specific moments, topics, and persons in the history of psychology via the recovery and critical analysis of archival as well as published sources. Critical editions of relevant primary texts or archival sources are also welcome. The national traditions in Europe are respected not only in their own right and in their interrelations, but also in their further connection and confrontation with non-European research traditions. With this focus, the Yearbook aims at uncovering paths to aid the understanding of the common and of the specific roots of European scientific thought, and its building connections with non-European traditions.

With an eye on the interdisciplinary nature of cultural studies, EYHP pays special attention to those common areas between psychological research and its adjacent disciplines, in particular the human and the life sciences (philosophy, sociology, anthropology, psychiatry, physiology, neurology, biology, zoology, etc.).

Aimed primarily at historians and philosophers of psychology, epistemologists, historians of philosophy, and historians of human sciences, the journal is also open to contributions from all areas of psychology that address a phenomenon or topic of interest in psychology from a historical perspective and/or with an epistemological approach. Besides original essays, the yearbook encompasses the following sections: unpublished and archival material, discussions (a space where authors can confront one another and discuss specific topics), interviews, book reviews and reading recommendations.

Highlights:

- Pays special attention to common areas between psychological research and its adjacent disciplines
- Respects and analyses each national research tradition
